New Propositions.

Everall Propositions have lately been propounded by the Lords and Commons in Parliament to the Kings most Excellent Maiesty, they leaving no way unat-tempted, to gaine his Majesties Royall favour, and the peace of the Kingdome, witnesse those 19. Propositions lately sent to Torke and presented to His Maiesty, yet neverthelesse all their endeavours find a bad successe and all their care is rewarded with discourtesie, for it is too apparent that His Maiesty intends to raise Warre against the Parliament, for information is given to the House that seve-rall Persons have endeavoured to raise Forces, promising great rewards to those that would be ayding in that service, Likewise the Lords and Commons received a Letter from Holland, which the Earle of Northumberland read in Guild-hall, that there is at this time at Amsterdam many thousands of Carabines and Pistols. three thousand great Saddles, 300 Barrels of Powder, 8. pieces of Ordnance, making ready to be sent to England, for this designe, and it is thought to be bought with part of the mony borrowed on the Jewels of the Crowne, likewise a Chaine of Pearle and other Jewels sent backe, money being denyed to be lent on them, by reason of the late Order made by the Parliament to the contrary.

These and the like Assurances of danger, caused the Lords and Commons now resident in Parliament to publish severall Propositions in generall, to all the Kingdome.

This

This was also the motive that induced these Noblemen to make these other propositions to this Honourable Citie, that being cheifely concerned in this businesse.

The above named Earles, comming to the Hall where the Lord Major and Aldermen, with the Common Councell of the Citie were assembled.

The Earle of Northumberland read those Propositions which were published by the Authority of Parliament, after which the said Earle declared upon what grounds they did proceed, and their causes of feare, which were cheifly these.

1. Because his Maiesty by the perswasions of the malignant Party, doth endeavor to force a dissolution of the Parliament, to which end, by severall Persons, and in severall Counties, he hath endeavoured to raise Armes.

2. That these Forraigne preparations of Armer, purchased with the jewels of the Crowne, can portend nothing lesse then such a dangerous designe.

A 3

3. That

3. That those armed Cavaleers at Torke committing severall outrages already on his Maesties Subiects, giving out severall words against the Parliament, both dangerous and scandalous, is a free Declaration of their intents, what they intend to put in Act, if they once gaine strength by their supposed Forraigne supplies.

To these they added these Propositions.

1. Whether it stood not for the better security of the Citie in generall, to venture a proportionable Stocke for the maintenance of Forces to defend and secure the generall from the danger of such intended Stratagems.

2. Whether it were not much better for those that had Plate or Money to put it into a generall stocke, the faith of the whole Kingdome being ingag'd for the returne of it, then to let such Plate or Moneys be made pillage and prey to the enemies of the Kingdome.

To

to which Propositions they annex these Reasons.

That for such Moneyes or Plate so ventured if the Kingdome stood, they were assured to receive the value againe with Interest, and the rest of their estates secured, but on the contrary they could neither keepe that, nor ought else, their lives and estates running on equall hazard.

These Propositions with the Reasons were generally liked, and condiscended unto.

Likewise the said Earles declared that they have underwrit for foure hundred Horse,
